TRAIL DESCRIPTIONS: The trail is primarily on walking paths in Norlo Park and the road shoulders and sidewalks in residential areas and business areas around Fayetteville. Sidewalks do not all have curb cuts. The trail is suitable for strollers. Wheelchairs will have difficulty.

Norlo Park is popular for walking enthusiasts because of its sweet network of walking trails. Kids will enjoy the playgrounds before and after the walk. In the park, you will visit the 1880's Quincy Railroad Station which once serviced the town of Quincy on the Mont Alto Railroad, and later the Cumberland Valley and Pennsylvania Railroads. See the two Pennsylvania Railroad Cabooses! Your walk route will take you along the original route of the Lincoln Highway as well as very short stint along the highway's re-route as you explore the Fayetteville Antique Market. Enjoy the lovely view of South Mountain as you stroll down the historic road to Lee Way, a 19th century Victorian-style farmhouse with eerie architecture. Ponder the old home with its spooky spires and decide for yourself: Is it haunted? And what is the story of “Cap’n” John H. Buckman, the architect of this odd house? Did he really die of carbolic acid poisoning?
